SHALL RABBI AND MINISTER EXCHANGE PULPITS?

FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

On the occasion of my formal installation as rabbi of Holy Blossom Synagogue, Mr. Leo Frankel, the president of this congregation, suggested that rabbis and ministers exchange pulpits occasionally, as both Judaism and Christianity have so much in common, and such an exchange would focus the attention of Jews and Christians on the things they have in common. Sir Wm. Mulock endorsed Mr. Frankel's suggestion. If the proposal of Mr. Frankel was a novel one for Canada, it certainly would not have been one for the United States. Ministers have preached from Jewish pulpits, and rabbis have spoken at Christian services. In fact, the very night that Mr. Frankel was making his suggestion here, a minister was occupying the most important Jewish pulpit on the Pacific Coast. A San Francisco rabbi, who had gone East for six weeks, on four of the nights of his absence from his congregation had arranged to have ministers take his place and deliver the sermons to his congregation. In my former Philadelphia congregation, one of the oldest in the United States, ministers have spoken from our pulpit during services on more than one occasion. When attending the conference of rabbis some weeks ago, many of my colleagues informed me that in their absences local ministers were filling their pulpits. On several occasions I have spoken from church pulpits. The proposal that minister and rabbi exchange pulpits is neither rash nor radical, but is one which has been carried out beautifully and successfully in some American cities.

A local newspaper for several days interviewed several ministers on the suggestion, and their answers I wish to consider. One minister refused to commit himself. He stated that he felt the question too weighty for him to answer without very serious consideration. Another said that it was an ideal, which could be realized in the far distant future. A third endorsed the suggestion, and said that the exchange of pulpits between rabbi and minister would seem both "correct and proper." A fourth, though he did not speak on the subject at hand, made, nevertheless, these significant remarks: "In social service and in ethical standards the Jewish rabbi and the Christian minister are at one. Personally, I have found many Jews who showed in their personal lives every evidence of the Christian spirit." A very fine statement, this, revealing tolerance and appreciation. Yet I want to analyze carefully a part of this statement: "I have found many Jews who shared in their personal lives every evidence of the Christian spirit." That minister is a fine liberal soul, aye a fine Christian soul; yet, when he speaks of Jews whose character he admires, he refers to them not as good Jews, whose life triumphantly attest a vital living Judaism, an old culture and tradition bearing beautiful fruit, but he refers to them as having Christian character and not Jewish character. In the light of history, it is easy to understand why this liberal minister with fine Christian character relapses into an old error. Judaism was regarded by Christian theologians as having had one function, and that function was to prepare the way for Christianity. Judaism was the mother of Christianity, and should have perished in the agonies of child-birth. After Christianity, Judaism retrogressed and withered. It became all ritual and all ceremonial. Its ethics became inferior, and its spiritual power, like blossoms that have borne their fruit, faded for ever. The Old Testament was imperfect and was perfected in the new. That was the official church attitude toward Judaism, and that liberal minister is still under its influence, and hence a Jew who practices Judaism, who has Jewish spirit, according to him, bears evidence of Christian spirit.

And yet what is this Christian spirit, to which reference is made. By Christian spirit, the minister has in mind not dogma, theology and ritual, but by Christian spirit he has reference to great ethical and spiritual ideals and passions—the ideals of charity, of justice, of mercy, of compassion, of humility, of love. Whence came these ideals to the Occidental world? They did not come from the savage Teuton tribes, nor did they come from the druid-worshipping Angles and Celts, nor from the barbarous Goths, nor from military Rome, nor from philosophical Greece. These great ideals, which sum up Christian spirit, were made known to the Western world by Jews. They were forged in the soul of Israel's great prophets. The fatherhood of God, the hope of a Messianic age, God's Kingdom, love, peace, humility, all these glowing ideals are found in the Old Testament—and have been transmitted to Christianity by Jewish teachers, from Jewish literature. "Have we not all one Father? Has not one God created us all?" said the prophet. Where have we a more concise statement of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man? "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" Justice, mercy and humility—Jewish virtues advocated by a Jewish prophet. These things which constitute Christian spirit to-day, these are Jewish ideals, and the irony of it is that when a Jew's life bears testimony to them it is said that he is filled with Christian spirit. When I see a Christian who tries to live the religion of Jesus, who is tolerant, kind, generous, humble—tolerant as this minister is—I say, "There is a man with Christian spirit. Christianity is shaping his life beautifully." Similarly I expect and hope that when Christians see Jews tolerant, liberal, generous and kind, they say "Here are real Jews who are living Judaism, in whom burns again the fires of prophecy."

The last minister to whose opinion I refer stated that there is no basis for compromise between Jew and Christian; that Jews persist in denying divinity to Jesus, while the Christians affirm it. There are many good Christian souls who hope that some day the Jews will see the light and accept Jesus as God. The liberal Jews throughout the world recognize Jesus as a great Jewish teacher and prophet, a product of the prophetic tradition. And nowadays many Christians are taking a similar stand. There is a great struggle on within the Christian church, between the modernists and the fundamentalists, and many of the modernists recognize the humanity of Jesus. The Unitarians have abandoned the trinitarian conception, and so have many Christian liberals, like Grant and Holmes, and these have thus vindicated the historic stand of the Jew throughout the ages that God is a unity and not a trinity. We agree with the minister that there can be no compromise with Orthodox Christian theology and Jewish theology. They are at two opposite poles.

But though the theologies vary, yet that is not a sufficient reason for objecting to the interchange of pulpits. For when you scrape away theological differences, when you forget about doctrines and creeds and dogmas, then you see clearly how much Jew and Christian have in common, aye, how much all men have in common. The same hopes and aspirations surge in human breasts be they Jewish, Christian or Mohammedan; the same pains and sorrows afflict all; the same joys and happiness delight all. Life and death, birth and growth, the mystery of the universe, the awe and trembling before the Creator, the King of Kings, the recognition of the majesty of nature—these are human experiences and cannot be labelled either Jewish or Christian. These we have in common with all men, as we have in common the desire for social service and ethical aspirations. The rabbi and minister can work together in promoting justice, in eliminating slums, in guaranteeing to every child an education, in keeping politics clean, in abolishing wars, in providing for the sick and needy, in furthering the higher spiritual and cultural interests of a community—and if rabbi and minister can work together in these causes then why cannot rabbi and minister exchange pulpits and advocate these causes, the minister in the synagogue, and the rabbi in the church. By our separate worship, by our separate institutions, we constantly emphasize our differences. Why not emphasize at times the things we have in common? Why not emphasize our common humanity? How can these receive better emphasis than by exchange of pulpits, and by a public recognition of the human ties that transcend the differences of creed and sect and that bind all men together.

On many occasions have we listened to Christian ministers, and have been inspired by them. No doubt there are Christians who have listened to rabbis, and who have been ennobled by their words. Just last week I walked into a beautiful cathedral in Montreal, where I witnessed earnest and sincere prayers, and was thrilled by them, where our aesthetic impulses were quickened, and where the vastness and beauty of it all made me conscious of our Creator. I have read, and read with profit, the sermons of outstanding preachers, like Parker, Brooks and Beecher, and have been molded by them. Surely then we Jews can be ennobled by hearing the words of fine Christian preachers.

I want Jews to appreciate the beauty of Christianity. I want Jews to know the good causes it supports. I want Jews to know that there are beautiful souls in Christian pulpits. And how better can that be realized than by having them stand in Jewish pulpits speaking the ideals which are all mankind's?

By so doing we will furthermore recognize what liberal Judaism teaches, that revelation was and is limited to no one people; that God did not only reveal Himself to Israel—that God did not speak only to the sacred men of the Jews. That is a narrow notion of God, which makes Him partial to any of His children, which makes Him reveal Himself to one and not to others. That is an old concept. God is not niggardly and miserly. To all peoples does He reveal Himself. In all lands has He made Himself known. To all men has He sent prophets—to the Chinese, Confucius and Lao-tse; to the Hindus, Buddha and Krishna; to the Persians, Zoroaster; to the Mohammedans, Mohammed; to the Jews, Moses; and to the Christians, Jesus.

God is the property of all mankind. His spirit is found in the bible—but it is also found in the sacred literatures of other peoples—in the psalms of the Babylonians, in the texts of the Egyptians, in the Vedas of the Hindus, in the Gathas of the Persians, and in the holy book of the Buddhists. All peoples have bibles all peoples know God—to all people revelation came.

This should be recognized, the beauty in all faiths. We should know that God strives to make Himself articulate among all peoples. We should be ready to welcome to Jewish pulpits, fine Mohammedans, Buddhists and Hindus, as we should fine Christians.

Just as we want Jews to recognize the beauty in Christianity, so do we want Christians to recognize the beauty in Judaism. For many centuries they did not do that—but those were dark years. Dark Ages. In this modern period Christians should and can undo an injustice of ages. By inviting rabbis to Christian pulpits such recognition will automatically be given. The prevailing conception is that Judaism is an inferior religion, that Judaism ceased to function

Chess Column

CONDUCTED BY MARK A. LEVY

Arrangements have been completed for the club championship tournament of the Judean Chess Club, which commences Sunday evening, November 29. As announced in last week's REVIEW, this tournament is open to all players, and will be held in three classes, A, B and C. Two prizes will be awarded in each class and teams will be selected from those scoring the highest points, to represent the Club in competition with the other city clubs. No entrance fee. Those desiring to enter should be present Sunday evening when the schedules will be arranged. The Judean Chess Club invites all who are desirous of learning the game or who wish to improve their playing strength, to be present at the club-rooms Tuesday and Thursday evenings. In an early issue will begin the weekly publication of the best games played in this tournament, also games from the International Tournament which is now being held in Moscow. A weekly chess problem will also be featured.

The Toronto Chess Club had an at home last Thursday evening. Clement Hambourg, pianist, gave a piano recital. A big match, open to all players, will be played between players of the eastern and western parts of the city, at the Toronto Chess Club, St. James Cathedral, Adelaide and Church Streets, Saturday afternoon, November 28. Those present will discuss the formation of the Toronto Chess Association, to comprise all the chess clubs in the city, of whom the Toronto, Judean and University are the strongest, with the object of promoting inter-club matches, and will also discuss arrangements for the Canadian Championship Tournament to be held in Toronto next year.

At the International Tournament, now in progress in Moscow, under the patronage of the Soviet government, J. R. Capablanca, of Cuba, chess champion of the world, and Dr. Emanuel Lasker, the ex-champion, head the assembly of experts. Dr. Lasker, the Jewish professor in the University of Berlin, champion of the world for twenty-five years and defeated by Capablanca in 1921, seems to be the probable winner of this important tournament, from present indications.

Lux for everything you wash yourself

Washing your most precious possessions with Lux is just as easy as washing your hands. The filmy Lux particles melt instantly into a rich foam of almost magic cleansing power, yet gentle to the frailest fabric.

For all dainty things that have to be washed often—as well as all valuable things that have to be washed seldom and with the greatest care—rely on Lux. Remember, it won't shrink woollens, nor will it harm a single silken thread. And Lux is just as mild on your hands as the finest toilet soap—in fact it benefits them.

Read the "Jewish Review"

Every Friday

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

About thirty years ago Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, in a book called "The Bright Side of Humanity," said of the Jews: "The Jew is liberal. His race is entitled to be called the most benevolent of all races of men. The Jewish beggar is not impossible, perhaps such a thing may exist, but there are few men who can say they have seen that spectacle. Whenever a Jew has real need to beg, his people save him from the necessity of doing it. The charitable institutions of the Jews are supported by Jewish money and amply, and the Jews make no noise about it; it is done quietly."

The writer was echoing the proud boast of the Jew that he has always taken care of his own, and if Dr. Pell were here to-day he might be told that the Jews take care of their own, and he might hear it even in Toronto, even in the face of deficits of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. There are cities on this continent where there is more money in the Federation treasuries than is needed for relief among the poor, and in such places the Jews do take care of their own, but in a community where cheques cannot be sent out to needy families because of the disgraceful fact that there is no money in the bank, it can be said that the Jews take care of their own after a fashion only. When a Federation languishes for want of funds then it must be rather a shame-faced interpreter to the poor of your heart and mind, it must hesitate in its speech and its hands must be crippled.

The Federation turns from squalor, filth, disease and all the ills that poverty creates to tell you about the fellows on the other side of the picture from you. It wants you to know why it needs money and what it does with it when it gets it. But you know already, don't you, that your money, when you give it, means rent, clothing, care for the sick, medicine, coal—unromantic things like that? You know that it requires your money to provide a home for this withered, old, childless creature; to send bread and milk into that hovel where the little ones sicken and droop; to place a guide near some delinquent boy; to save a despondent, unemployed father from loss of hope and self-respect; to help a mother regain her strength and poise so that she may care for the babies and hold her family together.

It is your great privilege, as comfortable people, to work such wonders of relief to the needy through the agencies of the Federation. As sensitive people, it is your inability to be happy while others suffer that makes any work of the Federation possible at all. That new car, the refurnishing of your home, its silky oriental rugs and things of beauty, the little platinum and diamond baubles—can you do nothing for the poor or just a trifle and be as happy over your possessions as though you gave what your sense of human decency tells you that you should? Stint in your giving and you lessen your satisfaction in the material blessings you have. Limit your gifts to the lowest amount you dare in the face of your neighbour's opinion and you must forever turn your eyes from the poor, and pretend not to see.

The Federation campaign for $100,000 opens next month. That's how much money it will take to cover the budget for the year, to foot the bills. Give enough, increase your subscription. Put the Federation on its feet this time and the Toronto Jewish community in a class with the enlightened, modern, progressive Jewish communities of the continent. When you give a little some get help and some don't, and then there is bitterest misery, hunger and want in the shacks that you don't know about. Make it different. Tell the Federation to tell the poor for you that it's going to be different this year. There will be plenty of bread and milk and coal this year. If many poor unfortunates know the pleasures of life only as they see you amidst pleasure at least be sure that they have the necessities of life when this is urgent.

The Federation can say to the poor nothing more than you say to the Federation. Don't talk about giving till it hurts! It is only when people give too little that it hurts. Talk about giving till you feel good about it. That will mean $100,000, a treasury filled, a conscience clear, the poor well cared for.

Social Life about 25 Years Ago— Do You Remember?—

The Montreal Herald published Harris Vineberg's expression of disapproval of certain Jewish candidates for office who tried to impress political leaders with their ability to deliver Jewish votes to order. Mr. Vineberg said that every Jew voted according to his convictions and not as part of a machine attached to any political party. Others who expressed themselves at the time in the same manner were Maxwell Goldstein, Michael Hirsch, Clarence I. de Sola, Lazarus Cohen, John Michaels, and Israel Rubenstein. Mrs. Samuel Glickman died at the Homeopathic Hospital. She had come from Poland and lived in Montreal for four years. She was a member of the McGill College Avenue Synagogue. The funeral took place from her home, 460 Sanguinet Street, to Shaar Hashomayim cemetery. Chairmen of committees of Baron de Hirsch Institute: L. Holstein, A. Goldstein, I. Rubenstein, Z. Fineberg, D. A. Ansell, A. M. Vineberg, Lyon Cohen, S. Fischel and E. L. Rosenthal were among those on the school committee. M. Markus collected donations for the coal fund. The Young Ladies' Work Society, Miss Essie Hirsch, president, gave underclothing to the girls, including Roumanian immigrants. The treasurer was Annie Saxe; secretary, Bessie Levinson; committee: Sara Morris, Ray Tannenbaum, Hattie Kellert, Gertie Silverman, Minnie Jacobs. Mrs. Jacob Kellert was cutter. The Protestant Board of School Commissioners forwarded $15.05 to the Institute from the proceeds of a concert in the Arena. E. L. Rosenthal sailed on the S.S. Umbria for England. Miss Sophia Hirsch returned from Detroit. M. A. Vineberg was in England. H. Friedman and family, of St. John, N.B., came to Montreal to live. The Maimonides Literary Circle held its sixth anniversary. D. Levy read a paper on Maimonides; M. Albert, an essay. Debate: "Resolved that industrial co-operation is better than industrial competition" Affirmative, H. Weinfeld. N. Viner; negative, A. Z. Cohen, L. Margoese. J. Weinfeld read a paper on "The Vitality of the Jew," and H. Cohen read one on "Sabbatai Zevi." Officers of McGill College Synagogue School: A. H. Jackson, chairman; A. M. Vineberg, secretary-treasurer; Z. Wener, A. Tannenbaum, M. Lightstone, trustees; Rabbi Kaplan, principal; Rev. M. Goldstein and D. Hoffman, staff. Born—a son to Mr. and Mrs. J. Samit; a son to Mr. and Mrs. H. Ellison. The seventy-fifth anniversary of Mrs. D. Lazarus was celebrated at her home, 154 Hutchison Street.

Jew and Christian in the Middle Ages

BY CHARLES SINGER, M.D., D.LITT., F.S.A.

Among the most interesting of the documents of the later thirteenth century that exhibit Hebrew scholarship is a collection of Latin letters, now at Toulouse, in which a group of questioners ask for information on a variety of Hebrew topics. These are answered by the respondent. Both questioners and respondent are Christians. The questioners, whoever they were, seem to have been without effective Hebrew knowledge. They occupied positions as university teachers, and in this capacity they had to read and comment upon various books of the Bible to their pupils. The respondent in these letters, however, not only knew Hebrew, but was a real rabbinic scholar and particularly acquainted with the works of Rashi. He knew French perfectly and had lectured probably at Paris. His scholarly reputation extended to Jewish circles, for he had Hebrew books sent him by a learned Jew in Germany with whom he carried on a regular correspondence in the Hebrew language. He had long sought these books and had written for them to a Jew in Toledo, but had not got what he required. Toledo was at this time a centre for translation from the Arabic and Hebrew.

It is interesting to see the subjects of these Hebrew books. They were mostly on mathematics and on the calendar. One was by Abraham bar Chijja, known as Savasorda, who flourished about 1116. This Abraham not only helped the Italian Christian, Plato of Tivoli, in translating scientific works from Arabic, but also himself wrote in Hebrew, as well as in Latin. Another work sought by the Toulouse scholar was a Hebrew translation of a work by Maimonides.

This mysterious but authoritative mediaeval Christian Hebraist seems to have been connected with the school of Roger Bacon. The most interesting thing about him, however, is that his letters have actually been used by a modern scholar for the correction of the Hebrew text of Rashi! This use of the writings of a mediaeval Christian Hebraist for the correction of the text of a rabbinic author is a unique event, and in itself speaks highly for the learning and accuracy of this unknown letter-writer, who was the most learned Hebrew scholar of the Middle Ages. The Toulouse manuscript in which this correspondence is to be found ought to be examined and published in full by a Jewish scholar.

Among the few Spanish Christians of the thirteenth century who showed capacity in the study of Hebrew was the Dominican Raymond Martin. He was a Catalan by birth and died some time after 1284. In 1250 he was selected to study Oriental languages at a Dominican college, specially founded for the training of missionaries among Jews and Moslems. He lived long at Barceona, and in 1264 he was commissioned with certain other Dominicans to examine Hebrew manuscripts, so that they might delete passages regarded as offensive to Christianity. They took the Talmud especially in hand. In his work, "The Sword of Faith," Martin tells us that many passages in the Talmud he found to be confirmatory of Christianity. His works show that he was a good Hebrew scholar and well-read in rabbinic writings. They were long used as a source for Dominican polemics.

Most interesting among the aspects of Hebrew scholarship among Christians in the Middle Ages are the attempts to render the Bible into Castilian. Though most of these translations were made from the Latin, a certain number go back to the Hebrew. Of these the most ancient is a version of the Psalter ascribed to one known as Herman the German. This man was the teacher of Roger Bacon, and his work must have been undertaken originally between about 1240 and 1256. The manuscript of the work tells us that the version is segun como esta en el ebraygo ("according to that which is in the Hebrew.") This does not mean a direct translation from the Hebrew, but a translation from the Latin of the so-called Hebrew version of St. Jerome. Nevertheless Herman several times corrects the Latin by an appeal to the actual Hebrew text. In the following centuries there were several more complete Castilian attempts to render the Old Testament direct from the original tongue.—The Jewish Guardian.

when Christianity came. The artist Sargent, in his murals, in the Boston Public Library, of the synagogue and the church, expresses the accepted notion. The church is represented by a young, virile, athletic, beautiful, energetic woman. She seems full of life and promise, an ornament to society. But the synagogue is represented by an old hag whose staff is broken, who is helpless and hopeless, a parasite in society, ugly and useless. That is the traditional Christian view of Judaism. That view is all wrong. Judaism did not stop growing when Christianity was founded. Nor was Judaism any more ritualistic than the early church—nor does the Talmud contain as many laws as do the church canon of the middle ages. Judaism continued to be a living faith. It continued to grow and develop and it is still growing and developing to-day. Throughout the Christian centuries, it produced philosophers, poets, and even prophets. Its ideas have changed with time and experience, and to-day it has a spiritual outlook on life and an ethical platform which is as good as that of any religion. True, Jews have not always practised Judaism, but neither have Christians, Christianity. The Christian world should recognize the beauty and spirituality of Judaism. The two religions are not rivals, rather should they be partners—partners in building God's kingdom on earth. The first step to tolerance, which both religions advocate but which their followers fail to practice, is mutual respect and mutual understanding. Jews should understand and respect Christianity and Christians should respect and understand Judaism. When that is accomplished, the foundation stone in that edifice of goodwill which Christian and Jew will some day erect will have been laid. The exchange of pulpits by rabbi and minister can hasten that day.

The Jewish pulpit is dedicated to the great ideals of the prophets of Israel, to justice, peace, humility, love, tolerance and democracy. Whoever speaks justly should be welcome to speak from them. Whoever preaches peace, whoever preaches tolerance, fellowship and goodwill, can add to their sacred traditions. God in heaven does not regard creed and race and theology; then how can petty man be so haughty as to say to his neighbour whose character he admires, and whose ideals he cherishes, "You are not good enough to speak from my pulpit."

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

INECTO RAPID

*Is the Best Hair Tint
on the Market*

Having seen recent demonstrations by other dyes, I am more convinced than ever that there is no hair tint on the market that compares favorably with Inecto Rapid. No other preparation is safer to use than the new Inecto Rapid. We also have greater protection than any other preparation in our Anti-septic Lubricant which prevents the dye from touching the scalp.

W. T. Pember, Canada's oldest hair man, with 39 years' experience in dyeing hair, has gradually perfected Inecto Rapid and brought it up to the present standard. Therefore, if you want a hair coloring that colors grey hair and will stay the color you want, naturally you will buy no other but Inecto Rapid.

Special instructions for dyeing with Inecto under difficult circumstances will be found on the yellow slip wrapped around the tube of lubricant, and any further information will be gladly given by writing the distributors:

Installation of Rabbi Jesse Schwartz

Over 1,200 persons crowded into the Goel Tzedek Synagogue on University Avenue last Sunday evening, to witness the induction of Rabbi Jesse Schwartz. Dr. Herman Abramowitz, of Montreal, officially inducted Rabbi Schwartz into his pulpit. He emphasized the duty of the rabbi to strive after Jewish scholarship, to preach above all the Torah and to manifest in his own life and character the ideals he expounds. Rabbi F. M. Iserman, of Holy Blossom Synagogue, extended to Rabbi Schwartz the bond of fellowship as his colleague in the Jewish community of Toronto. Dr. Louis Finkelstein, of the Faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America spoke of the need of bringing back the Jewish youth to the Jewish people and expressed his faith in the future of Judaism in America.

The inaugural address of Rabbi Schwartz will be published in a forthcoming issue of the REVIEW.

Rabbi Jacob Gordon delivered the benediction. Cantor Abraham Barkin sang a liturgical piece. A reception in the vestry rooms to Rabbi and Mrs. Schwartz was arranged by the Women's Auxiliary of the Synagogue.

TO THE EDITOR,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, TORONTO.

SIR:

Will you permit me a few words with reference to your editorial headed "The J.D.C. and the Zionist Organization"? You lament the breach between the J.D.C. and the Zionist Organization and suggest a united campaign for Zionism and for relief. Unfortunately, your article overlooks the real facts of the case and does not even hint at the serious difficulties in the situation.

Your mention of a campaign for relief touches at one of the roots of the trouble. At the National Conference held in Philadelphia, September 12 last, it was proposed that the Jews of America undertake a vast colonization scheme in Russia, or rather that they furnish the capital required for the execution of a colonization scheme which had already been undertaken by a few American Jewish millionaires without consulting the Jewish masses who were expected to foot the greater part of the bill. The plan is to settle about 25,000 Jewish families as farmers in the Crimea within the next three years and eventually to extend the programme until 100,000 Jewish families shall have been settled on the land. For reasons which I shall refer to later, many Jews who look upon the Palestinian experiment as the most important thing in Jewish life to-day, opposed the Crimean plan. A compromise was agreed upon whereby colonization extension was relegated to the background and it was decided to organize a campaign for $15,000,000.00 to be used for Jewish relief and reconstruction. It was expressly declared "that American Jewry, whenever called upon, is prepared generously to support the work of Jewish resettlement in Palestine."

It is becoming increasingly clear that the leaders of the Crimean movement were not honest when they agreed to the inclusion of the Palestinian reference, and had no intention of permitting the necessities of the work in Palestine to affect the realization of their pet scheme. Also, the Zionists who were present at the Philadelphia conference are beginning to feel that they were outwitted and that they agreed to more than they intended to, or ought to have agreed to. Mr. Brown and the other staunch supporters of the colonization plan are going ahead with their work apparently in complete accord with their original plans, and are, it seems, ignoring all the terms of the compromise agreement which were intended to safeguard the needs of Palestine.

They are proceeding with their campaign to raise $15,000,000.00—a tremendous sum, even for the Jews of the United States. After that is done, there will, without doubt, be further campaigns. In the meantime, what about Palestine? If the United States is drained for colonization in Russia, where will the money come from that is essential for the completion of our work in the land of Israel? Some money will doubtless be collected for Russian colonization which would never have been available for work in Palestine. But the fact remains that most of the money which will be collected during the next ten years for work in Russia will be diverted from Palestine.

Before the Russian scheme took up the centre of the stage, our prospects in Palestine were becoming more and more cheerful. Immigration into that country is increasing by leaps and bounds, and as immigration increases, the Zionist budget requirements must also increase. If there is any doubt about the final success of the Palestinian experiment, it is quite conceivable that the diversion of a large part of American funds from Palestine to Russia may spell disaster for a Jewish Palestine.

Zionism is regarded to-day by most Jews as the only hope for the salvation of the Jewish soul. Materially, too, the success of Zionism will mean the end of a black and terrible period in the history of the Jews. We are asked to risk this success—for what? For what is after all nothing but a bit of philanthropy. The success of Zionism will change the course of Jewish history; the success of the Crimean project will mean probably nothing to the Jews as a whole, and its effects will probably be completely vanished and forgotten in a generation. There are 2,000,000 Jews in Russia who require assistance. How can the settlement of a few thousand families on farms withdraw more than a drop from the bucket of Jewish suffering?

It is noteworthy too, that those who are in the greatest need have not been the ones who have received the assistance of the J.D.C. Only Jews who could provide a considerable portion of the cost of settlement on land were given assistance and those who had nothing and needed assistance most were left where they were—the object, of course, being to settle as many people as possible with the available funds. This indicates that what the leaders of this project have in mind is primarily colonization, and not relief.

It should be remarked also that most of the sponsors of this movement have been notorious for their opposition or indifference to Zionism. The proposal too has the warm sympathy and support of the Soviet government, which, is of course, the bitter enemy of every manifestation of nationalism.

There is no guarantee that a change in the political situation in Russia or in the attitude of the leaders of the Soviet government will not result in the Jewish colonists being deprived of their land; although this would probably not be sufficient ground for refusing to undertake this work, were it not for the other grave objections to the plan. It should be borne in mind also that if the Soviet government continues to rule Russia for a generation and continues its persecution of the spirit of religion and of nationalism and its exceedingly effective propaganda against these things, then these colonists whom we are settling at such tremendous cost will eventually be completely assimilated and will cease to be part of the Jewish people.

The leaders of the Zionist movement realize these things and they think the proposed colonization scheme will bring more harm than good to the Jewish people. It requires great courage to oppose any scheme for the relief of suffering, and most of the Zionist delegates to the Philadelphia conference must have lacked either backbone or foresight or both, or they would never have permitted Zionism to give its stamp of approval to the Crimean project. So long as the work was confined to a number of American millionaires, few of whom would have given anything for Palestine reconstruction in any event, the scheme was worthy of approval and sympathy. But the moment it assumed the proportions of a great continent-wide movement intended to extend over a period of years and to engage the primary attention of the whole of American Jewry, it became a menace to Zionism, and hence to the Jewish future.

Yours, etc.,

PERCY SHULMAN.

EDITOR, CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

SIR:

The Federated Jewish Farmers of this province are now proceeding to establish a school wherein we will train all Jewish men who will turn to the soil for a livelihood, and hope in this way to solve two great problems. One is a Canadian and the other a Jewish problem.

The Jewish Training Farm will produce farmers for Canada, and knowing the dire need that our Dominion has for a class of people who will turn to the soil for a livelihood, they will be accomplishing a great Canadian duty in turning out year after year groups of young men who will be trained as farmers.

In the second place, this scheme will relieve greatly the present immigration problem. It will open Canadian doors to our less fortunate European brethren, since the Government will readily admit young men who will enter a training farm and there be educated in the art of farming. Hundreds of trained farmers will be turned out year after year. This process can be continued for very many years until two great problems will be completely solved.

This scheme, which has recently been inaugurated, has been brought to the attention of both Federal and Provincial Governments, and they have given us permission to bring out all the men we can place in our farm school or at other farm work, as well as assisting some to buy farms. But this is an entirely Jewish experimental farm; we Jews must make it successful and thus do our duty by our Dominion and by our brethren.

We have approached the I.C.A. on this matter, but it may be an infringement on policy and principle if they take up a problem which is so necessarily local. The I.C.A. with its benevolent work is scattered the world over, while this undertaking is purely a Canadian one. We cannot therefore hope to have the I.C.A. invest its energies or finances in any local matter, and prefer

Why Federation Needs Money

A Few Typical Cases of Family Relief

N— Family

This family consists of the father, mother and six children under sixteen years of age. They came to Canada two years ago, from Palestine. The father a while ago had his thigh dislocated and was in the hospital for over four months. Although he received $2,000 compensation, practically all of this money was lost in a business venture, in which Mr. N. embarked.

When their resources were exhausted, the family moved out of the store flat, which they had been occupying, into three crowded rooms. There the Federation found them in abject circumstances, without food, without heat, and with little clothing. $10 was left for the immediate purchase of food.

The father is unable to work as it is difficult for him to walk. Until a few weeks ago the sole income was the $8 wage of the oldest child. This boy is now unemployed—had his finger cut while working. At present he is receiving medical treatment. The younger brother, although lame from a foot infection, is now looking for work.

The younger children are all under-nourished and weak. They all require medical attention.

Mr. N— is now being treated medically and will be unable to work for several more months. The children through Federation were medically examined and blood tests taken. The Federation had this family moved into a larger flat, for whose rent it pays. In addition $10 weekly is sent to this family, besides clothing and shoes.

In the last six weeks this family has received from Federation the sum of $75.00.

W— Family

This family consists of the parents and five children. The father is suffering from tuberculosis, diabetes and other troubles. He has been suffering from these diseases since 1915. For two years he was in the Weston Sanatorium and was discharged in April, 1925. Mrs. W— is also delicate in health. She is chronically sick, highly nervous, suffers from indigestion and needs a great deal of dental treatment.

The two older boys, who were working are now unemployed. Both boys have a high school education but at the same time they find it very difficult to secure work. The three younger children are all at school. The family comes from good stock and is unaccustomed to receiving charity. The father requires constant attention, special delicacies and foods.

The Mothers' Allowance Commission gives $35 a month. The boys bring in about $10 a week at the present time. The family occupies three rooms in a house owned and occupied by their married daughter, for which they pay $25 a month for rent.

Federation assists at present with $5 a week, milk and clothing.

Since January, this family has received, through Federation, the sum of $75.

F— Family

The F— family consists of Mrs. F—, thirty-eight, a pale thin little woman, worn-out with six small children, all under fifteen. Mr. F— died recently after an operation for goitre, having undergone three operations previously during the past few years. Mrs. F— goes out to work daily at a shop as a finisher, and at night during the season she works at a furrier's.

Upon the shoulders of the pale-faced little girl of fifteen falls the burden of the care of the five children and also a sick grandmother and a paralyzed grandfather who lives with them in a six-roomed house. She performs this at the sacrifice of her schooling, etc.

Mrs. F— earns from $14 to $18 a week. She is proud, respectable and attempts to maintain the family at a high standard of living. The oldest child should be allowed to continue with her schooling. While the mother goes out to work, the Federation should supply a housekeeper as well as a weekly allowance for this family so that the girl can continue at school. The Federation gives $6 a week to this family. The Junction Society sends $3. Since January 1, 1925, this family has received from Federation the large amount of $395.

The E— Case

Mrs. E. and her two sick children occupy one upstairs room in the home of her sister, who sells chickens. Mr. E— was taken to the insane asylum suddenly in the summer of 1922. A few months later a second child was born.

Mrs. E— is shrouded in misery. She has a little son of five who was born an idiot, and who is absolutely helpless. He has not the use of his limbs, he cannot walk, he cannot talk, he cannot see. He lies on his bed or sits in chair, a massive human lump, to which neither science nor medicine can be applied. The youngest child is also abnormal, he is sickly, weak and ailing, and needs special food and care. Both the children need constant care and feeding.

The tragedy of Mrs. E—'s life—her husband's insanity and her children's imbecility—have sapped all the zest and energy out of her life. There is no prospect of future happiness for her. Besides mental discouragement she is physically nervous and worn out.

The Federation has assisted Mrs. E— and her children with $30 a month for the past two years. Owing to the fact that her husband is not a citizen she is not eligible for Mother's Allowance nor is she eligible for citizenship.

When the imbecile child becomes older he will be placed in an institution. Relieved of the care of this child Mrs. E— will be able to return to her work as a seamstress and become self-supporting.

This family has received from Federation since January 1, 1925, the sum of $330.

An Open Letter to All Who Care

By Joseph A. Woolf, Executive Director of the Jewish Philanthropies

November 25, 1925.

To the Supporters of Federation:

Next month the 1925 fiscal year of Federation ends.

What of 1926?

During the past eleven months Federation raised and spent $45,510. Of this amount $31,400 went for the care and relief of the poor and the sick. Two hundred and seventeen (217) different families received monetary assistance, while two hundred and eighty-five (285) other families asked and obtained services other than monetary.

Never in the history of Federation has so much money been spent for relief nor so many families assisted. In 1924 $30,320 was spent for relief and $28,775 the year before that, while the average amount per year the first five years of Federation for relief of the poor was $23,669.

Federation has tried hard to meet the extremely heavy demand caused by unemployment, illness, loss of bread-winners, etc., but it could not meet all demands adequately.

Over $50,000 must and should be spent for the care and relief of the poor alone.

The Jewish Children's Home received from Federation since January 1, 1925, $6,550.

The Federation expended $9,398 through the Boys' Club, the Girls' Club, the Boys' Camp and the Girls' Fresh Air Cottage to give health to starving and under-nourished children and to fight delinquency.

But more must be done.

Federation needs $100,000 for 1926.

rather to enable it to carry on its extensive international duties. But I do hope that since this is our own Canadian-Jewish experiment, all public-spirited Jews in Toronto and elsewhere in the Dominion will throw themselves into the work and carry this project to an ultimate success.

We are at present in great need of machinery, stock, implements and an accommodation building; we have a large number of applications from various places in Canada, Mexico. There are a great many people living in Canada who are desirous of bringing their friends out from Europe. Unless we get immediate assistance financially, we will not be able to carry out our projects.

The Joint Distribution Committee of America are planning to campaign for $15,000,000 to colonize the Jewish people in Russia, and are asking we Canadians to contribute to this fund. No doubt this is one of the best movements ever undertaken by American Jews but why should all that money be spent in Russia. Have we forgotten the pogroms and other persecutions against the Jew? Why not spend at least part of this money in Canada where the people and the Government are the assurance of safety? Canada is a land of great opportunities and to-day, there is not another land throughout the whole world that offers better opportunities to farming.

Yours sincerely,

M. SAXE,
President, Federated Jewish
Farmers of Ontario.
